The defendants of the subject of bridging Western rivers came up again in the Senate, to-day, on a motion of Mr. Rameey to reconsider Mr. Morton's resolution, passed on Saturday, in order to leave the whole subject of bridging the Ohio tobe first reported upon by the Engineer Corps, as in the case of the Missispip. Before the vote, Senator Morton asked leave to present some additional papers bearing upon the general subject. Among these were the affidavits of the heaviest coal and salt dealers in Pittsburg and along the Ohio as to their methods of shipping, and the dangers and losses from bridges. To one of these lecalled the special attention of the Senate, which stated that in one tow they take two bundred and forty thousand bushels of coal, equal to eight thousand five hundred and seventy-three cur loads. This coal operator states that his losses from simple detentions at the Steubenville bridge, in one year, independent of collision of destruction produced by contact with the bridge, was $8,000. Governor Morton, after presenting considerable testimory from prominent persons and organizations interested in river unwigation. continued, at some length, to urge that the Senate should allow no main span of less than five hundred feet. Now that Stanton is really out and a successor is actually to be appointed, there is much ado about the War I) spartment. It is the general impression that Schodiald will faully be confirmed, though this is not positively certain. The President declines to withdraw his momination. The conservatives regard this as an error similar to the retention of Stanton after it was proven that he was a traitor to the service in which he was engaged. Why Mr. Johnson sticks to Schofield I know not. Gen. Mr. Bingham declined to answer until he had leeve from his colleague, but after several more votes, at half past eight o'clock, made a statement that no such refueal had been made.

The Speaker stated that the Sergeant-sl-Armshad asked him if Woolley could have access to his counsel, and he replied in the affirmative, and at any time. Mr. Binghame' motion that the a vote on the resolution offered to countit Woolley to close close confinement go over till to morrow was highly r hiected to and persisted in remonstrance by the Republicane, who arged that there was no condition embraced in the proposition.

The Sergeant-st-arms at several times within the least two hours, brought in absentees, and a morum was obtained about 10 c'clock, and Mr. Burr's motion to lay Mr. Bingham's resolution on the table having been negatived, 28 to 36, the resolution was adopted without the yeas and sys.

Mr. Bingham then proposed to aver the second resolution in order that it might be passed pro torma.

A motion to reconsider wee entered and will be discussed to-morrow, when a vote will be taken at two o'clock.

The second resolution directs Woolley to be kept in close confinement until its shall answer, and meanwhite no person shall communicate to the Conference whether in their judgmant the Epicopal Board ought to be strengthened at this time. Tabled.
